FURNACES.

THE ATTENTION of the community generally, and of house-builders particularly, is invited to the Keystone Heater, tately patented by J. D. Green, of Philadelphia.

All persons incrested are solicited to call at our store and satisfy themselves of the superiority of this heater over all others in use. So esceedarfully have the principles of combustion been applied in its construction, that although it presents a radiating surface of one hundred and fifty square feet, it requires thirty per cent, less coal than any furnace hereforce manufectured. and fifty square rect, it requires formace berefore manufactured.

Every improvement that an experience of thirty years in the furnace business could suggest has been applied in the production of the Keystone Heater, and its proprieturs feel assured that, for efficiency and economy of use, it is unsurpassed.
